THE FAILURE OF SUPERVISION: IS IT THE CAUSE OF OFFICER FAILURES?

MONDAY, JUNE 16, 2025

0800-1700

$150 / PER PERSON

SAN JUAN COLLEGE - CONNIE GOTSCH THEATER

Your Department is only as strong as your weakest supervisor. Close and effective supervision has never been more important than it is today. Supervisors must ensure their officers understand and follow all department rules and regulations and are held accountable for any violation of department policies. Departments must ensure that their supervisors are properly supervising and disciplining their officers, that all complaints or allegations of misconduct are properly investigated, and that departments regularly and properly train their officers and supervisors.

Attendees will understand the legal obligations associated with Monell Liability and Failure to Supervise.

Attendees will understand national standards applicable to training and developing first-line Supervisors.

Attendees will review recommendations for the Development of Supervisors

TACTICAL OPERATIONS LIABILITY

TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 2025

0830-1630

$150 / PER PERSON

SAN JUAN COLLEGE - CONNIE GOTSCH THEATER

One of the most critical tasks in law enforcement involves the use of tactical officers to accomplish high-risk operations. While the success of these operations requires extensive training and proper equipment, success also requires sound decision-making from the moment the decision is made to utilize a tactical response to a police event. The media and litigation may even scrutinize the decision after the fact. Much of the developing law can be found in reported decisions of the federal courts. The course utilizes the case-study approach in order to identify the critical policy and practice considerations that will assist tactical commanders, supervisors, and officers in making legally defensible decisions without compromising operations during tactical events.
